Cultural Heritage data bank Sindh – A new approach towards cultural heritage management

Since the devolution of culture after the decisions of the 18th Amendment, the province of Sindh is responsible for its own heritage management.

With this decision of devolution not only the province of Sindh was taken by surprise as for the province only the provincial remains of the former federal institution structure of the Department of Archaeology and Museums remained available for the continuation of this important task.

Besides the responsibility of almost thousands of smaller historic sites and monuments, the responsibility also of two of the most important World Heritage sites, Mohenjo-Daro and the Makli graveyard, rests on our shoulders. Mohenjo-Daro, the largest Bronze-Age city of the third millennium BCE worldwide is a full fledged city with more than 40 km² of excavated standing brick walls being latently endangered by sulfates in the ground. The necropolis of Makli is with several thousands of graves and tombs one of the largest necropolis worldwide. Some of them made of sandstone, others of bricks and covered by glazed tiles, are highly endangered by thermal, physical and chemical stress.

While ‘normal’ world heritage sites consist of one or a few components, our sites are extremely large, complex and ‘serial’ which is an extraordinary challenge for the Government.

The primary tool for the management and the protection of heritage for a Government is the ‘Monuments List’, an official register which is the basis for legal protection and management. Such lists had been started in 1871 when Sir Alexander Cunningham became the first director of the Archaeological Survey of India (ARASI). With the division of the British Raj in 1947 into the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Indian Union, the archives, museums, and administration files of the former ARASI were divided accordingly. During this process many documents got lost, also listings of protected heritage sites. The large amount of existing listings (mostly in type written copies) are difficult to use, as the locus of monuments is registered in outdated descriptions of tasil, village names, using topographic and other descriptions like 500 yards north of a big tree, turn 200 yards left....

With this data bank a new basis is laid for an effective protection and management of monuments and sites. Each and every monument has been identified by its UTM coordinates allowing immediate tracing in satellite maps and thus making them accessible for experts and administrations.

With this new data bank our administration can run one of the most advanced systems to improve not only the heritage management but also the legal protection of the cultural treasure of Sindh. In addition, it allows scholars to obtain access to it and to add in future further research information. Therefore we are glad that terminals are available with the Heritage Foundation, Karachi, and with Jamshoro University, Prof. Kazi.

We are extremely thankful to the German Government, and here especially Consul General Dr. Tilo Klinner, for financing this program. Our deep thanks goes to the initiator and executer of this program, Prof. Dr. Michael Jansen, RWTH Aachen University and architect Yasmeen Lari, CEO of the Heritage Foundation, Karachi. This project only was possible through their long friendship and wonderful cooperation. I specially want to mention the teams on both sides, but again especially all the 'field workers' who during a period of two years collected all data in often remote areas.

Finally I want to thank 'my people', who enthusiastically supplied data and infrastructure to make this project a success.

I deeply hope that we profit from this installment and hope that other provinces will join for the benefit not only of Sindh but of whole Pakistan.

Cultural Conservation in the Computer Age – A Data Bank as a Unique Policy Instrument

Looking at these five volumes of data about the rich cultural heritage of Sindh leads me to some reflections on history and its constituent role for the way societies see themselves and others. Mankind consists of human beings whose existence is largely defined by their social interaction with others, past or present. As such we are not isolated from the events preceding our time but part of a great chain reaching from the prehistoric mist into a distant future. History represents the collective memory of mankind. People possess an intuitive a priori understanding of time and space, reflected in oral tradition, literature, music and other forms of cultural tradition. In this context, it is worth mentioning that among the remnants of civilizations tangible monuments play a central role. They constitute crucially important material and visible incarnations of bygone days bearing witness of our past and our cultural heritage or, in other words, of our spiritual genes. This is all the more true in circumstances where we cannot have recourse to written tradition because it is absent or, as in the case of the Great Indus Culture, its script remains illegible for us. It is therefore of paramount importance to preserve monuments and tangible objects.

The province of Sindh with its long history is one of the culturally richest areas of Pakistan. Starting with the Paleolithic finds in the Rohri Hills the soil of Pakistan's southernmost region reveals signs of continuous settlements from the dawn of civilization till today. Sindh boasts prominent sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List as the enigmatic Bronze Age city of Mohenjo-Daro close to the modern city of Larkana or the historic necropolis Makli with thousands of burial-places and mausoleums from the Samma period till modernity. In 711 AD the Arabs landed in Sindh and brought Islam to this part of the world. Bhambore is a prominent example of these early Islamic times. Later in Thatta the Moghuls built the wonderful Shah Jahan mosque. Hyderabad was once the capital of the dynasties of the Kalhora and Talpurs as was earlier Khudabad. Near Khaipur we find the remains of luxurious Talpur palaces as we still are impressed by their grim fort at Kot Diji. Sindh is abundant with graveyards and burial sites of "saints" still worshipped by the locals. Famous ones are those of Lal Shabas Qalandar in Sehwan Sharif or the tomb of Shah Abdul Latif at Bhit Shah.

With the decentralization of competences in the field of culture by the 18th amendment in 2010, Pakistan's provinces took over the responsibility for cultural heritage management. Now the provinces have to implement this constitutional reform and provide for the necessary human resources as well as instruments to protect the cultural heritage from undue interference or damage. The Federal Republic of Germany takes pride to contribute to the build-up of a heritage management realizing the present pilot project of a digital cultural heritage data bank in the province of Sindh.

We are very thankful to Prof. Michael Jansen and his team from RWTH Aachen University who developed the concept and the software for this program. Equally, I would like to express our profound thanks to Ms. Yasmeen Lari , CEO of the Heritage Foundation Karachi, and her team for their relentless efforts to collect the data in the field, using old registrations from the Department of Archaeology. In close cooperation with both partners a data bank containing more than 1000 comprehensive, multilayered and complex data records has been set-up. In two workshops the experts of the Heritage Foundation were trained in Makli and at the Heritage Foundation's headquarters in Karachi.

Last but not least I would like to thank the Minister of Culture, Sharmila Faruqui, and the Cultural department of the Government of Sindh for their close cooperation and their trust in our endeavor. Especially we are grateful to Mr. Qasim Ali Qasim, Sindh's director of Archeology, who made this project possible.

The data-bank is a potentially very powerful instrument in the hands of politicians, scientists, researchers and cultural conservationists. Close to the end of the project we were able to set up a working station at the institute of Archeology and Anthropology at Jamshoro University adding a further element to an innovative cultural heritage network. It will be the task of the Department of Archeology of Sindh to extend this network by co-opting further academic institutions and other stake-holders. I would like to conclude with the hope that the fruit of so much enthusiasm and hard work will fall on fertile ground creating a reliable, powerful tool for the effective protection of the unique, rich and multi-faceted cultural treasures of Sindh.

Inventory of Cultural Property in the Province of Sindh, Pakistan

It does not need the naming of diamonds like Mohenjo-Daro and Makli amongst the jewels of Sindh to open the cultural treasure box of the lands at the Lower Indus. Lined by the Khirtar mountains and Baluchistan to the west and the Thar desert to the east, the south coastlands of Sindh are divided by uncountable waterways of the gigantic Indus delta opening to the Arabic sea. Sindh ends geographically north of Sukkur near Kashmore. With its rich cultural diversity it is marked till today by its own language, the Sindhi, which was intensively studied in the 19th century by the German scholar Trumpp. Only recently we lost another German scholar of the Sindhi literature, and culture, Prof. Annemarie Schimmel. Sufism was home in Sindh with famous sufis like Lal Shabas Kalandar in Sehwan, Shah Abdul Latif from Hala or Satchel Sarmast, just to name but a few.

Till today Sindh forms an almost hidden and unknown treasure only known by a few. Rarely westerners dare to move to the hinterland of Karachi to travel by road to Hyderabad and from there either the great trunk road along the eastern riverside of the Indus to Sukkur or the western road, the 'Indus highway' via Dadu, Sehwan Sharif, Larkana to Sukkur or to Jacobabad up along the Bolan pass to Quetta, passing the most ancient site of Mehrgarh. There was too much trouble in the hinterland since the past 20 years, dacoits stopping cars and trains and robbing passengers, kid napping and other crimes.

Compared to the north, to Lahore, Rawalpindi and Islamabad, Sindh seems to have been given up by the western world: investments by the World Bank and by aid programs of different nations take primarily place in North Pakistan.

There is an enormous discrepancy between the vibrant 20 million moloch Karachi and the almost medieval, towns and villages of the hinterland in Sindh. Slowly Hyderabad and Sukkur seem to come up and to develop in larger cities while Larkana, the city of the Bhuttos, Khoros and other land lords seems to remain in its past agony. One of the drastic changes came in 1932 with the construction of the 'Lloyd Barrage' in Sukkur which since then dams the gigantic summer floods of the Indus and distributes the water through 7 canals to more than 40.000 square kilometers of land, having turned barren land into fruitful gardens and fields. With the irrigation program the natural setting of Sindh has been drastically changed.

Another drastic change occurred through the partition in 1947 where thousands of refugees crossed the new border between Pakistan and Indian Union, Hindus who left many cities in Sindh to join the Indian Union and Muslims coming from there to join Pakistan.

Through these events the heritage of Sindh changed a lot.

Today many of the rich witnesses of Sindh have either disappeared or need urgent conservation. Based on the long tradition of almost 80 years of the British Archaeological Survey during the past 65 years enormous efforts were made by the Federal Department of Archaeology and Museums with its last director Dr. Fazil Dad Kakar to be the care taker of the Pakistan cultural property.

It was a great pleasure to have met Dr. Tilo Klinner, Consul General of the German Consulate in Karachi, after my presentation on Mohenjo-Daro at a Sindh conference in Karachi. Having seen my film by Südwestrundfunk and Arte (2010) on Mohenjo-Daro, we discussed possibilities how to assist the Government of Sindh in its endeavor of heritage management, especially after decisions by the National Assembly in 2010, expressed in the 18th Amendment, to decentralize culture and education to the provinces.

Being suddenly confronted with such a responsibility, the provincial governments were rather overburdened as none of them had time to develop an appropriate infrastructure for cultural management. As a consequence in 2012, on the initiative of Heritage Foundation and the Royal Embassy of the Netherlands, in collaboration with Culture Department of the Government of Sindh, senior cultural heritage representatives were invited to join a Round Table in Karachi/Makli, under the chair of the former Secretary Culture Uqaili. This meeting which also was attended by the Director General DoAM, Dr. Kakar, the German Consul General, Dr. Klinner and the representative of UNESCO Dr. Kay Negata and Mr. Kazii Mahessar, turned out to be very successful. For two days problems and conceptions were discussed and it was decided that this Round Table should be taking place regularly.

One of the outputs was the presentation of the conception for the establishment of an electronic cultural inventory, forming the basis of all other cultural activities. The former inventory partly originating from the British colonial period had been kept in lists which, after partition and after many changes was still incomplete. In addition they originated from the 'pre digital' times where geo-referenced satellite imagery and GPS were unknown. Descriptions of localities traditionally were based on local phenomena like landmarks, trees, etc. which in most cases do not exist anymore resulting in the problem that the loci, at least for administrative purpose in many cases were not traceable anymore. But, the basis of all cultural management is the proper identification of the loci to be dealt with.

RWTH Aachen already had according experience in establishing a provisional data bank for Afghanistan for the control of damage through the Taliban regime. In addition within the Cultural Masterplan Bamiyan the micro recording, monument by monument, for the UNESCO World Heritage site Bamiyan had been taking place.

Through the initiative of the German Consulate General the following concept was worked out:

- Through a contract between the Federal Republic of Germany, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the RWTH Aachen Center for Documentation and Conservation (ACDC), a program could be established for the documentation of approx 1000 sites over a time span of two years.
- The documentary should be based on the software, partly already developed at RWTH Aachen University
- ACDC suggested to invit Heritage Foundation as a long standing partner for the projects in Sindh. The reason for this cooperation was and is the excellent local presence and reputation of the Foundation and, most important, the capacity with local experts to execute the program of data collection even in remote areas of Sindh. We express our sincere thanks for the wonderful cooperation with the Foundation.
- It was decided that Heritage Foundation would obtain the permission from the Government of Sindh for this data collection showing RWTH Aachen University as coordinator from outside. This management structure proved to be very successful.

After several discussions regarding the structuring of the data bank with the Heritage Foundation, the Director Conservation of the Government of Sindh, and the German Consulate Karachi, we came to the solution to establish two levels of information:

1. An administrative level which allows the Directorate of Archaeology Sindh to identify all sites with modern technology and to administer the sites in relation to protection and maintenance/ conservation.
2. A scientific level allowing the registration of all research data relevant for the site itself, with the arrangement that authorized organizations /educational institutions would be able to add to the data.

The reason for the selection of the two levels is for level one:

1. The maps available are of not adequate quality and the traditional, mostly outdated description of the loci did not allow for a proper tracing of the sites
2. As logical consequence out of 1, an according administration in relation to protection (site attendance, protective boards) and conservation is not possible.

For level two it was and is important that all relevant scientific data is available under one data registration to allow, besides scientific conservation, the adequate scientific interpretation. Here a new strategy was decided, namely to keep the collection of data 'open', meaning that no 'boxes' to fill were designed but instead, an 'open' registration system was developed based on text analyses for sorting information.

Due to the enormous amount of data collection (more than 1000 sites) the primary aim of the project was to collect the necessary data of listed sites of the cultural inventory for level one anticipating that the first need of the day is to establish an adequate management structure for the Department of Culture, Government of Sindh. The collection for level two (scientific data) would take place once the administrative level is set.

It is to be hoped that the data bank structure will be later adopted also by the other provinces to culminate in a national documentary of Pakistan.

Regarding the sources for the field work execution, a first list from the federal inventory for Sindh was supplied by the directorate archaeology comprising 129 sites. Today we are aware that this list is incomplete. The inventory was once started under the British ruler-ship by Alexander Cunningham in 1871, being regularly published in the Gazetteers and in the Government publications of the ARASI, Memoirs of the Archaeological Survey of India and after partition in 1947 in the publications of Pakistan Archaeology etc.

Therefore, to complete the former federal list, additional research in the Gazetteers and the according publications is needed, which partly already has been carried out by the Heritage Foundation.

In 1994 the Sindh Government started with its own provincial listing, primarily concentrating on town surveys initiated by the Heritage Foundation and concentrating on Karachi as well as in Shikarpur by NED University Karachi.

Therefore, the present collection of data is primarily concentrating on notified sites by both the federal and the provincial listing. There are much more sites in Sindh unregistered and unprotected.

With this program, therefore, only a first step can be made to set the basis for continuous completion of the inventory as a tool for the protection, conservation and research of the 'jewels of Sindh'.

Managementwise the project is based on three working places: one with the directorate of archaeology, one with the Heritage Foundation and a third at Jams-horo University, Hyderabad.

We thank all who were and are actively involved in this exciting and successful project. Our special thanks go the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Berlin, Dr. Klin-ner, Consul general in Karachi, Mrs. Yasmeen Lari, director Heritage Founda-tion, Mr Qasim Ali Qasim, director Archaeology and finally Madam Sharmila Faruqui, Minister of Culture, Sindh.

My final thanks go to the Aachen team, and here especially to Dipl. Ing. Gustaf Mossakowski as IT 'brain' and Luca Liehner as 'designer' of the present data bank printout.

Foreword by Yasmeen Lari

It is no secret that Sindh is a veritable treasure house of heritage sites. That it will require an enormous amount of concerted effort to save the cultural legacy from destruction, is also well known. Lists of significant heritage had begun to be prepared by the British and published in early journals of Asiatic Society of Bengal and continued throughout the colonial rule. The sites thus identified were notified under Viceroy Curzon's Antiquities law, "Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904" initiated by John Marshall, Director General of Archaeological Survey of India - not forgetting the contribution made by 'native' scholars such as the great Muslim educationist Syed Ahmed Khan, Kanhaya Lal and Syed Mohammad Latif. After Independence the identification of more sites continued during the tenures of various directors general of the Federal Department of Archaeology, notably Dr. F.A. Khan, Dr. Naqvi, Dr. Ishtiaq Khan and Dr. Ahmed Nabi Khan, although, regrettably, the records mostly gathered dust in files. Following the tradition of the British, the Archaeology Department considered itself custodian of monuments and sites alone, and barring a few instances, overlooked urban and residential heritage assets.

It was in 1979 that a study was carried out by Yasmeen and Suhail Zaheer Lari of the historic town of Thatta, and windcatcher houses were measured with the help of Dr. Michael Jansen and his team from University of Aachen, working in Mohenjo Daro at the time. A paper by Lari on traditional architecture of Thatta (later published in book form in 1989), presented at conferences in Karachi and Peshawar at the time, brought focus on the importance of medieval walled cities. This was also the beginning of cataloguing heritage sites by Heritage Foundation of Pakistan. The first catalogue of Karachi's Zaibunnisa Street was published in 1986, which formed the basis of the Foundation's National Register of Historic Places of Pakistan series – covering first Karachi and later other areas of the country. It was this seminal work, supported by Lari Associates, Architects and Urban Designers and the family's Khyber Insurance Co., due to which the Foundation could clamour for and become instrumental in formulation of a law to provide protection to Sindh's urban heritage. Karachi's first 600 structures, published by the Foundation in National Register series of 9 Karachi documents, were notified in 1994 under Sindh Cultural Heritage (Preservation) Act, 1994, and the reason why Karachi's heritage has survived in spite of the avarice of land speculators in positions of eminence.

During the 1980s, the Foundation became greatly involved in the World Heritage Makli necropolis, publishing first the Samma Monuments (1997) and in 2010 a pictorial catalogue of over 50 monuments for Prince Claus Fund. In 2011 extensive surveys yielded a comprehensive catalogue, accompanied by numbering of all 477 heritage assets including platforms and graves, that helped define the Core Zone and lead to the first authentic map as well as the National Register of Historic Places of Pakistan of WH Makli.

It is fortuitous that Dr. Tilo Klinner, Consul General of Germany, having a profound understanding of the value of heritage cataloguing and documentation as a road map leading to strategies for its safety, and Dr. Michael Jansen, being deeply engaged in developing heritage management procedures, were able to promote the concept of Electronic Databank of Heritage of Sindh to the German Government.

Under the program from November 2013 to March 2015, the present e-databank covers 1162 notified heritage sites of Sindh, while scores of other sites have been catalogued, to be uploaded after notification.

The e-databank is the result of a collaborative framework between University of Aachen and Heritage Foundation of Pakistan. Dr. Micheal Jansen's team at the University has developed the software, provided the necessary guidance and throughout the project duration continued to provide trouble shooting and server management. The Foundation's field teams composed of architects, having undergone necessary training, have developed site sketches and information as well as the latest images from far corners of Sindh according to predetermined schedules. The entire data after review, has been meticulously uploaded by a dedicated team of senior members at the Foundation's Karachi office, along with coordination and research into various notifications. It has been a challenging task to say the least, due to unsettled conditions in the interior, poor road infrastructure, power breakdowns and unreliable internet connectivity.

Although due to constraints, the personnel of Directorate of Archaeology could not fully participate in the project, however, the Foundation has set up working stations at the Directorate and at Mehran University where the data has become accessible. In the recent discussions with the newly appointed enlightened Secretary, Sindh Culture Department, Dr. Niaz Ali Abbasi, it is expected that, with the support of the enthusiastic Minister for Culture, Hon'ble Mohtarma Sharmila Faruqui, arrangements will be made in order that the data from Aachen University Server is mirrored in Culture Department's Server in Karachi.

It is hoped that, as suggested by the Secretary, by forming a committee the data would not only be protected and disseminated, it will be regularly augmented in order to cover each and every heritage asset in the province.

I would like to place on record my warm thanks to Dr. Tilo Klinner for his continuing support and to Dr. Michael Jansen and the University of Aachen Team, who were readily available for discussion and guidance. At the Foundation, for their hard work my thanks are due to Mariyam Nizam, Hina Zaidi, Faria Khan, Ijlal Karim, Marvi Mazhar and Noor Jehan Sadiq at Karachi office, to young architects Ataullah, Ayaz, Imtiaz, Ishaque, Junaid, Murtaza, Noorullah, Saifullah, Shoaib and Tauseef, who were part of field teams. I would also like to thank Qasim Ali Qasim, Director Sindh Archaeology, for being available to point out sources and review finalized lists.

Heritage Foundation of Pakistan is proud to be associated with this project which has yielded the most comprehensive data regarding the heritage of Sindh that has ever been compiled – that is available at the click of a cursor in order to devise strategies to save it for future generations.

Instruction for use

The present print out consisting of four data volumes and one index volume represents only a selection of information available on the data bank:
<http://media.arch.rwth-aachen.de/>

The access to this data bank is presently restricted and will be granted only by the director of the Department of Archaeology, Government of Sindh.

To allow for an additional access, however, this selected print out has been produced for the administrative use in the department and at places where the access to the data bank is not possible.

In accordance with modern management administration the data bank and its print out should be available to other ministries or institutions dealing with regional planning to allow an insight to cultural heritage places and for their protection in accordance with the law. Besides the needs of coordinating inter-ministerial administration it represents an important source for research.

While the data bank represents a dynamic system which can change daily through new entrances, this print out is – traditionally – static, showing data at the time of printing. Moreover, due to the limits of printing, each site or structure is given only two pages of space, already resulting in a publication over 2000 pages. However, the registration of sites and structures within the data bank consists of hundreds of photos, maps and eventually thousands of text pages, which of course cannot be printed out in total.

The data bank is an «open system» in which whatever data exist from a site or structure can be stored.

It consists of two parts. The first, the «horizontal» one, primarily describes the locus itself (coordinates in the WGS84 reference system, a short description, if available from the official monuments list, time of official listing and a set of photographs taken by GPS camera registered in Google maps). It serves primarily administrative purposes for the government, identifying and protecting the monument as demanded by law. It should also serve for conservation of structures according to ICOMOS/ UNESCO standards.

The second, the «vertical» one primarily serves research. Here researchers are able to add any information available to the site or structure, beginning with historic sources and ending by any new discovery made. It can consist of texts, photos, plans/ maps and even videos. It serves as a knowledge pool for researchers and research institutions. The entry of data is made under the supervision of the Directorate Culture, Sindh Government, access to data is granted by the same institution.

The Locus:

The name of the sites and structures derives from the different monument lists of the Government of Sindh. Presently only one name for each site or structure occurs in the print out. Yet it is possible in the data bank that other names to the same place can be added, even in Sindhi language.

For easier identification, an «identifier» has been added to the coordinates consisting of three letters. As this system of using the locus name for the identifier has not been followed up consequently by the field teams, in addition the name of the locality has been added (e.g. Sukkur).

Searching for places in the data bank is quite easy: one just has to enter the name and the registration occurs. In the print out the present Volume «Introduction» serves as an index, sorting the sites and structures 1st alphabetically by registered names of localities, and 2nd alphabetically by identifier. Through the identifier and the coordinates, the place may be traced in digital maps as well as in the print out form. In the printout the locations are referred to by book (I-IV) and by page (e.g. 265). In addition, in the data bank the local maps can be looked into, in the print out the printed maps might also help to identify sites and structures. In the data bank it is possible to zoom into the site or structure, which is also possible in a normal web based map once the coordinates are known.

The Visualization:

As mentioned before, in the data bank a digital map appears showing all positions by interactive markers of photos taken by GPS camera of the site. A link to the photo is then shown once the marker is clicked. In the print out however, there are four types of icons marked by letters and colours: 1. black and S = site center; 2. grey and F = fixpoint; 3. blue and P = photo taken and 4. red and P = preview picture shown in the print out.

The Descriptions:

The texts describing the localities have been compiled during the field surveys campaigns in 2013 and 2014 by Heritage Foundation team members. Where available, descriptions from authoritative documents have been used and indicated as such. In these cases, the related document (e.g. legal text or notification) is related to the site entry as a scanned document (sources identified by SD/References/..., e.g. SD/References/GoP-AA1975/Annex-AA1975) and can be studied in detail.
